

2.3.1 Student centric methods, such as experiential learning, participative learning and problem-solving methodologies are used for enhancing learning experiences using ICT tools

The institute emphasizes student-centric, experimental, participative, and engaging learning methods and activities in addition to traditional teaching methods.

Expert Lecturers and Guest Lecturers are frequently invited to impart their expertise, thereby augmenting students' comprehension of pertinent subjects and offering insights into contemporary job market dynamics.

Experiential Learning is a cornerstone of the Psychology and Sociology curricula. In Psychology, students engage in practical activities such as case studies and laboratory experiments, facilitating the application of theoretical concepts and enhancing their understanding of human behavior. In Sociology, experiential learning encompasses community-based projects and ethnographic studies, enabling direct engagement with social issues and diverse communities, thereby fostering critical thinking and practical problem-solving skills.

Participative Learning is further accentuated through interactive endeavors, including group discussions; quiz competitions, elocution contests, and poster presentations. These activities promote collaborative problem-solving, stimulate intellectual curiosity, and refine public speaking abilities while encouraging creativity through research-driven visual communication.

The integration of Information and Communication Technology (ICT) has revolutionized traditional education, transforming it into a dynamic and efficient process. During the COVID-19 pandemic, online lectures became indispensable and have continued to serve as a vital educational tool.

Collectively, these initiatives cultivate a vibrant educational environment, promoting holistic development while equipping students with critical life skills essential for their future endeavors.

TOPIC IN DISCUSSION

The HDI and positive attitude, it is generally accepted that higher levels of human development are associated with a better quality of life and higher levels of happiness and well-being.

For example, countries with high HDI scores tend to have better access to healthcare, education, and economic opportunities, which can lead to greater life satisfaction and a more positive outlook on life.

However, it is important to note that a positive attitude is not solely dependent on external factors such as a country's level of development. Individuals can cultivate a positive attitude through personal practices such as gratitude, mindfulness, and positive self-talk, regardless of their external circumstances.

TOPIC IN DISCUSSION

■ Research the company:

Before going to the interview, it's important to research the company thoroughly. Learn about the company's mission, values, and culture. Check out their website, social media channels, and recent news articles to get a good understanding of what they do and how they operate.

 Prepare for common questions:

Be prepared to answer common interview questions, such as "Tell me about yourself," "What are your strengths and weaknesses?" and "Why do you want to work for this company?" Practice your responses beforehand so that you can answer confidently during the interview.

■ Dress appropriately:

Make sure you dress appropriately for the interview. This may vary depending on the company and industry, but it's always better to be overdressed than underdressed.

 Arrive on time:

Make sure you arrive on time or a few minutes early. Being punctual shows that you are dependable and responsible  international communication:

English is the most widely spoken language in the world and is used as a common language for communication between people from different countries and cultures.

 Education:

English is the language of instruction in many universities and educational institutions around the world. It is also the language of many academic journals and publications, making it essential for academic and research purposes.

 Business and trade:

English is the language of international business and trade. It is the primary language used in international conferences, negotiations, and agreements.

 Technology and innovation:

The majority of technology and innovation are developed and disseminated in English. Knowledge of English is essential for keeping up with the latest advancements and developments in science, technology, and other fields.
